World Soil Day Message by Dr. Anil Mehta

Udaipur: Water and soil are not mere resources; they are the very foundation of life. To ensure their continuity, sustainability, and vitality, we must instill a sense of service (seva) toward nature in our thoughts, actions, and way of life.

On the occasion of World Soil Day, during a special field session organized by HCM RIPA, Lok Prashasan Sansthan for the Assistant Engineers Training Batch, I shared this message at Badi Lake. This year's theme, "Caring for Soil: Measure, Monitor, Manage," rightly focuses on the importance of soil, but it still falls short of acknowledging its true essence. Soil is not just a resource; it is a living entity with immense social, environmental, cultural, and spiritual significance.

Soil nourishes not only our bodies but our minds and souls. The process of soil formation takes thousands of years, with just one inch of soil requiring centuries to develop. Our survival depends on soil, as ninety-five percent of the food we consume is produced from it.

Yet, we fail to show it the reverence, respect, and devotion it deserves. Concrete now blankets vast expanses of soil—from homes to roads to cities—while pesticides, plastics, and other pollutants are draining the life force from the soil beneath us.

We must work to restore and preserve the living vitality of soil and water. As engineers, we have the responsibility to foster greater sensitivity and a sense of service (seva) toward the environment, both in our professional and personal lives. I urge you all to embrace the Prime Minister's Lifestyle for the Environment (LIFE) mission, integrating its principles into your daily actions. I also took this opportunity to highlight the ecological importance of Badi Lake, a critical resource for our environment.
